Heavy-Duty Cable Protectors from Io Audio Technologies Offer Superior Protection

Rugged cable protectors guard audio, power, and industrial cables against damage from vehicles, equipment and people...

DALLAS, TX (September 27, 2018) – Io Audio Technologies, a division of Knight Electronics, Inc., has developed a series of heavy duty cable protectors that safeguard audio, power, and industrial cables against damage from trucks, material handling equipment, and people. The KORE Series of cable protectors are a temporary solution for shielding cables in work zones or live event situations. The cable protectors have a multi-channel design that helps keep cables organized and separated into 2, 3 or 5 channels.

Bright yellow tops and caution symbols are visible to oncoming vehicle and foot traffic to warn of the ramp in the road or walkway. The KORE Series cable protectors have a skid resistant rough pattern that will also prevent people from slipping in wet conditions.

The rugged cable protectors are easy to setup and can accommodate cables up to 1½ inches in diameter. The ramps feature a single piece design with a top hinged lid for easy access, the KORE Series has a high impact resistance and dynamic load bearing properties of up to 8 tons.

With a puzzle piece design, interlocking the ramps is easy and requires no tools for assembly or breakdown.

“These heavy-duty cable protectors are designed with safety in mind, but at a significantly lower price than comparable products on the market” said Randy Rivero, VP of Technology for Io Audio Technologies.
